

Welcoming One Another

Most of the time we are bombarded with the external pressures that we can regulate by an hour at the gym, a brisk walk with the dog, or simply a conversation with a person with a listening ear and a cup of coffee.

Yet it is the internal struggles that take captive the heart and well up into reactionary responses that we wish we could take back, never spoken, or quite frankly distanced ourselves from. We need each other! How important it is for all of us to find a respite in the welcoming relationship of “one another”. There is something to be said about a special invitation into a welcoming relationship.

Romans 15 speaks specifically. “We who are strong have an obligation to bear the failings of the weak, and not to please ourselves.” (Romans 15:1 ESV) “Therefore welcome one another as Christ welcomed you, for the glory of God.” (Romans 15:7 ESV)

Welcoming “one another” is at the heart of our ministry. Always inviting and including others into relationship. We would like to extend that welcome to you, our readers. We would love to hear from you, as well as offer an invitation to participate with us in the furtherance of the gospel. You can do this by joining others in community (taking a class), using Genesis Institute as a reference point for those who are hurting and need help navigating in a difficult time, and by your praying and considering investing financially in this important work we do at Genesis.
